

Christmas letter 2000!

Another year has passed by and if I knew that so many things would happen this year I don't think I would have made it. It started out like a normal year, but during the spring I decided because of personally and professional reasons to leave the ministry. I had been working as a pastor inside the Seventh-Day Adventist Church for the last 12 years and it was time for me to move on. Not that I have lost my faith in Jesus Christ our Lord, but that I needed to do something else. My choice was easy. I started working in the summer 2 months as a social worker. Later that autumn I started a new work as a probation officer working for the Swedish government - Kriminalvårdsverket. The work is not that much different than working as a pastor - I am helping people in need. Most of my clients have alcohol and/or drug problems. Some people find it hard to work with this kind of people, but they are humans too. I am not preaching any longer with words instead I am telling them with my actions through my actions that Jesus Christ loves them
